Marcel Lefebvre

Full Stack Web Developper at Freelance

marcel.lefebvre01@gmail.com

Summary

I'm a full stack web developper with experience in retail, wholesale and e-commerce sector. For some years I have worked as a salesman, managed an e-commerce website and a warehouse using web and server based tools; I believe it gives me a better understanding of what a client from these sectors might need. I am currently developing websites as a freelancer, building blogs and company sites from the ground up or using CMS applications like Wordpress; I also work on e-commerce platforms using open source software. I like learning new skills and trying to overcome new challenges. I love being taken out of my comfort zone. I enjoy working either alone or in a team, and I am a fan of open collaboration and using open source software. I particularly appreciate working with a mix of technical and non-technical people, as the variety of inputs and point of views generally lead to more interesting solutions. I have a college education in history, international studies and Japanese language, but I learned most of my programming skills online, through online classes and self-studying. I am currently freelancing while I pursue new opportunities and can be reached through this profile.
